Ban on Aid To Turkey Is Vetoed

Ford Move Will Get House Test

By Fred Farris WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (IHT).

—President Ford today vetoed legislation cutting off U.S. military aid to Turkey, declaring that it was "destructive" of American efforts to bring about a Cyprus astilement and would imperii the NATO alliance.

The President had previously warned that he would reject the measure and today called the effort to halt such aid to Turkey "an act which is harmful even to those it purports to help," meaning Greece.

His veto sets the stage for Mr. Ford's first major confrontation with Congress in his two-monthold presidency.

The House, which Friday rejected, 187 to 171, a compromise on the aid issue, will try to override Mr. Ford's veto tomorrow. A two-thirds majority is needed to do so, and it is doubtful

'Our National Income' In fighting inflation, Mr. Wilson said, his government would avoid restrictive measures leading unemployment. It would penalize anyone who seeks "to take out of our national income more than he puts into it by his work and effort and skill," he said. But he went on to stress his intention to help British industry out of its cash and credit problems. The government's pledge to extend public ownership would be carried out in the context of a mixed economy featuring "a vigrous, alert, responsible and profitable private sector, he said.

'A leading Iranian oil official dropped a strong public hint 10 days ago that his country may now be willing to accept a cui of about $1 a barrel in the prevailing Persian Gulf price, which has been about $10. Russia Seen Reaping Benefits From Increase in Oil Prices

By Theodore Shabad

NEW YORK, Oct. 14 (NYT).-While the leaders of the Western world have been struggling against the impact of the higher cost of oil, the Soviet Union has welcomed the recent price in-creases by the cartel of producing countries on both economic and political grounds.

As an oil exporter itself, the Soviet Union has been reaping economic benefit in the form of Establishment of close Saudi-Iranian cooperation has been such a standard U.S. policy objective that a general tendency has developed to dismiss American urgings for closer links as mere rhetoric.

Cooperation was blocked by Saudi suspicions of the purposes behind the Iranian military buildup and by the Shah's attempts to force Saudi Arabia to go along with his campaign for still higher oil prices against Saudi wishes.

The Saudis have argued that It is pointless to accumulate nuge sums of Western currencies if it only leads to the West's economic ruin. King Faisal of Saudi Arabia has consistently indicated his dismay over the Iranian insistence in December, 1973, on the tripling of oil prices by the OPEC. King Faisal indicated that the price rises were unwelcome at the time because they made it seem as if the Arab oil embargo, started during the October, 1973, Middle East war, was imposed for financial rather than political gain.

Meanwhile, King Faisal told Mr. Kissinger yesterday that Saudi Arabia would take up the effort to push down the price of oil in concert with other oilproducing nations.

Mr. Kissinger received that pledge following an audience with the King in Riyadh. Although Sheikh Yamani has spoken before of lowering oil prices, a senior U.S. official said that this was the first time the King personally had backed it up.

King Faisal's position is extremely important because of Saudi Arabia's large oil reserves. but senior U.S. officials believe that Algeria will have more influence on an eventual change in the price of oll since it leads a bloc of left-wing OPEC nations. Reporters were told that Mr. Kissinger does not anticipate 2 change in the price of crude oil before next year, perhaps in

Fahmy in Russia, Seen Supporting Kissinger Moves

MOSCOW. Oct. 14 (Reuters). Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy arrived today to discuss the future course of negotiations on a Middle East peace settlement. In three days of talks with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and other Kremlin leaders Mr. Fahmy is expected to argue that continued U.S. mediation in the Middle East dispute is vital for progress. The Egyptian minister flew to the Soviet capital following a briefing given to him and President Anwar Sadat in Cairo by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger on the results of his current Middle East tour.

The Soviet Union rejects Egypt's working through Mr. Kissinger in an attempt to obtain further partial agreements

On Friday, Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev warned the Arabs against placing too much trust in U.S. diplomacy and suggested that Mr. Kissinger was favoring Israel by negotiating only small steps toward an overall settlement substantially higher oil revenues to help pay for imports of West-ern technology. The increased intake of foreign currency, in turn, has reduced Moscow's need for credits in the view of some economic analysts.

In an apparent effort to take advantage of the favorable price situation the Russians have been accelerating work on expanded oil-export facilities such as pipelines and tanker-loading terminals at ports on the Black Sea and the Baltic Sea. One nineline nearing completion will carry Siberian oil to the harbor of Novorossisk on the Black Sea.

Politically, Moscow has welcomed the quadrupling of oil prices because of what it perceives as a weakening of the grip of Western oil companies on Middle East resources. It has also pointed to the disarray in Western economies stemming from the sharply higher fuel costs as further evidence of weakness in the capitalist system.

Not Much Leverage

Although eager to turn the world oil situation to their advantage, the Russians are not believed to have much direct political leverage with the principal oil-producing countries.

The Soviet Union is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Moreover, most of the major producers, such as Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iran and Venezuela, have been traditionally closer to the United States and other Western industrial countries than to the Soviet bloc. Egypt and Syria, where Soviet influence has been strongest, are not sig-nificant oil producers.

Soviet benefits from higher oil prices have been tempered by the fact that both the Soviet Union and its European allies have been importing increasing amounts of Middle East oil, presumably also at the higher prices.

Last year the Russians imported 14.7 million metric tons of oil mainly from Iraq, while exporting 118.3 million. Although Eastern Europe still gets most of its oil from the Soviet Union, Moscow has been urging its allies in recent years to look to the world market for additional sup-

The Soviet minister of the electric power industry, Pyotr Neporozhny, denied at news conferences during a visit to the United States last month that the Soviet Union was planning to take prompt advantage of the world price situation by sharply raising exports. He said the development of new fields would take time.

But in the Soviet Union at the same time, the press was reporting rapid progress on two major projects that were expected to enhance the country's oil-export At the Latvian port of Vent-spils, the Soviet Union's principal oil terminal on the Baltic Sea, a new deep-water oil-loading pier is scheduled to go into operation at the end of this year. terminal, accommodating large tankers, cost 6 million rubles ($8 million) and is expected to raise export capacity at Vent-spils by 30 per cent. It is now about 15 million tons a year.

The other project is the 1.000mile pipeline from Kuibyshey, on the Volga, to the Black Sea port of Novorossisk, which handles 30 per cent of Soviet oil exports.

Mexico Urged By Leftists to Join Oil Cartel

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 14 (UFI)—A leftist political party today urged that Mexico not only join the Middle East oil cartel, but also help establish a separate Latin American cartel to protect Mexico's new oil find against U.S. "imperialism."

The call for Mexico's entry into the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries coincided with reported U.S. plans to negotiate directly with Mexico on the new oil discovery in hopes of breaking the world oil cartel's leverage with the United States

The Popular Socialist party, one of Mexico's four legal parties, said that in addition to join-ing OPEC, a "parallel Latin rican organization of oilproducing nations should be created in defense of our interests against the aggressive position of imperialism."

The newly discovered fields in southeastern Mexico are believed to contain so much petroleum that the total may not only outstrip the Venezuela oil fields, but even the richest in the Middle

Niarchos Reports Suicide Attempt By Stepdaughter

PARIS, Oct. 14 (Reuters).—The death last week of Mrs. Tina Niarchos, wife of Greek shipping magnate Stavros Niarchos, followed a suicide attempt by her daughter. Christina Onessis, Mr. Niarchos's office said in a statement here today.

Mrs. Niarchos died of an acute edama (accumulation of liquid) in the lung, the prosecutor's office announced here yesterday. The statement from Mr. Niar-

These organizations are strongly opposed to any negotiations which recognize the existence of the State of Israel, which they are pledged to eliminate. They all are much smaller guerrilla orga-nizations than el-Fatah, which Mr. Arafat heads in addition to his duties as leader of the PLO, the umbrella resistance group. But they command strong support among the younger fedayeen.

The Baghdad communiqué, carried by the official Iraqi News Agency, said that the militant grouping denounced all current efforts to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict as "imperialist, capitulationist and defeatist."

The announcement seemed to refute effectively the claim by Mr. Arzfat's PLO to be sole representative of the Palestinians, It follows published reports here that PFLP leader Habash was working to establish a Palestinian organization that would be a rival to Mr. Arafat's PLO. The announcement may indeed mark the emergence of such a group. Lebanese officials were con-

PFLP official spokesman Abou Sharif declared last week, "The PFLP is currently undertaking large-scale activity for the mobi-lization of the Palestinian masses." Asked if this could lead to armed clashes, he replied, "After deciding to withdraw from the PLO executive committee, the PFLP made allowances for all eventualities-and I emphasize all eventualities."

Birthrates Said to Drop in 72 of 82 Nations

By Sara Hansard

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (IHT). -The world's rate of population growth is declining, says a U.S. foreign aid official, because of the increased availability of birth

Seventy-two of 82 countries with reliable population data showed a decrease in birthrates in the 1960s since the advent of contraceptives and other birth-control devices, according to a report by Dr. R. T. Ravenholt, the director of the Office of Population for the Agency for He attributed the main cause of the birth decreases to expanded efforts by AID in birth-control programs in the developing countries. He cited statistics showing that countries with family-planing programs during the 1960s had significant birth decreases while countries without these programs did not.

Dr. Ravenholt contradicted John D. Rockefeller's stand at the World Population Conference in Bucharest last August that family-planning programs in Third World nations were not working and that people's economic status must be raised before population growth will begin to subside.

There is no evidence of this myth that they don't want help. The availability of all birthcontrol methods (including contraceptives, abortions and sterilization) is the key to what they do," he continued. When the availability of birth-control devices is the same, "the same proportion of women there as here will use contraceptives," he said. Examples of areas with strong family-planning programs and declining birthrates he cited were Chile, Egypt, Hong Kong, South Korea, Réunion, Singapore and

Countries without family-planning programs whose birthrates either stayed the same or increased included Algeria, Brazil, Ghana, the Ivory Coast, Kuwait, Mexico, Peru, Venezuela and

The United States' birthrate also decreased in the 1960s. Dr. Ravenholt attributed this decrease to the "change in opportunity" for birth control and the legalization of abortions in some states. "The main source of exces: fertility here is teen-age pregnancies," he said. In 1973 the U.S. birthrate was 14.9 per 1,000 people, and in 1974 it is expected to be 14, he said.

Dr. Ravenholt said that AID's family-planning programs rep-

Dr. Ravenholt also said he thinks that with continued family-planning assistance, the world birthrate could drop to 20 per 1,000 people by 1980, which would be an overall population growth of 1 per cent. The annual growth rate is presently 1.7 per

The average birthrate among the world's 3.9 billion people is now 29 births per 1,000 persons. This means that this year the world's population is expected to increase by 68 million.

The problem now, he said, is that funds are inadequate to supply contraceptives for every-one wanting them. He said the anti-abortion amendment to the Foreign Assistance Act pending in Congress now would limit these funds even more. Making Up

But increasingly Mr. Giscard d'Estaing has been acting as a man more interested in making up for the basic conservatism of Georges Pompidou's presidency than in worrying about his own political future after his present term of office expires in 1981.

In economic terms, the deal confirmed the government's classic priority of maintaining employment over fighting inflation The ranks of those seeking jobs grew from $84,000 to 428,000 between August, 1973, and August, 1974—tiny figures by U.S. standards, but frightening enough in a country where unemployment traditionally is a major public and government concern. During the same period, the rate of inflation was 14.5 per cent, compared to 11,2 per cent in the United States and 6.9 per cent in West

In their view, it is questionable whether new technology, new seed strains, more fertilizer, pesti-cides and irrigation projects could repeat the kind of dramatic gains of the last 30 years in the United States—a period when yields of such basic crops as corn qua-

There is also concern that the weather has been underestimated by U.S. policymakers as a factor with profound impact on output. Some meteorologists say that there is evidence that the drought which damaged the corn crop in the Great Plains this summer may be a part of a cyclical period of bad weather.

Not all estimates are as entirely gloomy. Don Paariberg, director of economics for the Agriculture Department, said in testimony before the subcommittee that the United States has the capacity to product 9.1 billion bushels of corn and 23 billion bushels of wheat by 1985, compared with an estimated crop of 4.7 billion and 1.7 billion bushels respectively this

But even optimists agree that greater output and improved productivity will be far more expensive and tedious to achieve than in the past. Most farmland that was held out of production by the government during the surplus years of the 1960s is being cultivated again. Since 1972, when U.S. grain reserves dwindled because of enormous foreign purchases, some 40 million idle acres have been put back into crops.

Enormous Investment

Only about 428 million of the country's 2.2 billion acres of territory are used to grow crops. But economists say that the investment required to convert forests or barren or hilly pasturcland to iarmland is enormous. Mr. Paarlberg said that most promising irrigation projects to reclaim land are now completed and new ones will be costly.

According to Lester Brown, an economist with the private Overseas Development Council, water is in extremely short supply in nerts of rich wheat regions, farmers soon may have to compete for water with potential new producers of energy for the Project Independence program, he contends.

cause of these limitations, officials are counting mainly on increasing crop yields per acre to achieve the expanded production that President Ford wants. The House Agriculture subcommittee report spoke of a "throttling down" of research on livestock, fruits, vegetables, farm management, soil and land use. The report noted that there has been an inability to achieve technological breakthroughs recently in key areas. Scientists still have not been able to devise any commercially feasible way of producing more than one calf per cow a year.

Leading Farm Export

Also, scientists have not been able to achieve any dramatic rise in soybean yields, even though soybeans contain more protein than any other plant and are the country's leading farm export product. Manpower shortages in the countryside and the high prices of fertilizer also are problems which could limit dramatic production increases in the future. There is no question of the United States running out of food. Normally, the country exports a quarter of its corn crop, two-thirds of its wheat crop, close to half its soybean crop and 60 per cent of its rice crop. The question is how to satisfy U.S. consumers, commercial cus-tomers abroad and poor countries in need of cheap food to combat hunger—all in a period when the weather and limits on technology could both cause

The recommendations, which came after the expenditure of about $2 million, were contained in a 78-page final report released in Washington over the weekend. The engineers did suggest a $2.8million safety program to protect visitors from unexpected rock

The study says that it would cost as much as $15 million to remove rock piles that have partly obscured the face of the huge merican Falls.

The American Falls International Board also spurged a sug-gested $26-million remedial "facefting" of the waterfall that would have anchored cracking rock on its surface.

Unified Air Force Command Set Up by NATO in Germany

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (NYT). —The NATO allies are gradually repairing a weak command link connecting allied air forces on the northern and southern flanks of West Germany in a way that American defense officials believe will greatly enhance the air power of the alliance.

After considerable political bickering, the allies have agreed to establishment of a new command known as "Headquarters, Allied Air Force, Central Europe, The headquarters will provide the first centralizer control over allied air power in the German sector

No publicity was attached to the creation of the new headquarters at Ramstein air base in West Germany last June, Yet, in the opinion of Defense Secretary James Schlesinger and top air-force generals, establishment of the command represents probably the single most important step the alliance could take to improve its conventional military strength.

In the past there have been in effect two separate, uncoordinated air forces within the alliance. One is the Fourth Allieu Tactical Air Force on the southern flank, commanded by an American and composed of American, West German and Canadian units. The other, on the northern flank is the Second Allied Tactical Air Force, commanded by a Briton Belgian and West German units. Over the years, partly because of national differences, the two air forces have developed different doctrines and operating procedures. The net result is that, with most of the planes on the southern flank in the event of war there would be procedural and command difficulties in shifting them to the northern flank, which has always been regarded as the likely point of attack by the Soviet bloc.

Unified Control

The new command is to work out common operating procedures that a pilot would have no difficulty sulfting from one flank to the other. But, more important, the relatively small command of some 300 persons will provide unified control over the various allied air forces, which, as on- air force general observed. "never really talk .o each other."

Somewhat reluctantly, the British finally agreed that the new command would be headed t7 an American, Gen. John Vogt who is also commander of the Fourth Allied Tactical Air Force, The British were given the operations post, which they wanted The deputy commander will be a German, and the other posts will rotate between the Belgians and the Dutch

Creation of the new command is the political ingredient in what air-force generals are beginning to describe as "a potential revolu-tion" in allied air power. The other ingredients are technological developments that air force officials believe will greatly enhance the effectiveness of allied air power in stopping an armored assault by Soviet-bloc forces.

Ed Sullivan, Host on U.S. TV for 23 Years

Ed Sullivan, 72, the long-time cost $8 million a year to produce, television personality and Broadway columnist, died last night of cancer at a hospital in Manhat-

Sullivan, a rock-faced Irishman with a hot temper, painful shyness and a disdain for phonies, had been a well-known part of the Broadway scene since the 1920s.

But writing a gossip column, chuttling about the fringes of the entertainment world and being master of ceremonies for a succession of variety shows never gave him what he wanted most out of life-national recognition. He finally achieved that when he moved into television in 1948. and his weekly show became an essential part of Sunday evening for millions of Americans, Between 45 million and 50 million persons tuned in every week to watch the show-a vaudevillelike parade of top talent that and for which Mr. Sullivan was paid $164,000 a year. The show was dropped by the Columbia Proedcasting System in 1971, but he continued to be host on several specials a year.

He was not witty, he had no formal talents, he could not consciously entertain anyone. He bashful, clumsy, selfconscious, forgetful and tonguetied. And there were times when he was painfully sentimental.

The television critics panned him for those faults in the early years of his show. Sponsors were leery of him. The network pinched pennies on his budget to the point that he was using his own salary to buy talent.

But the public loved the show. Mr. Sullivan stuck to his job of introducing the acts, then getting out of the way. He was an excellent judge of entertainers, And that viewers became affectionately sorry for him.

Born in Manhattan, he moved with his family to Port Chester, N.Y., where he attended high school.

After graduation, he worked for several newspapers before ioining the New York Evening Graphic in 1927 as a sportswriter. In 1929, when Walter Winchell moved to the Daily Mirror, Mr. Sullivan was made the paper's Broadway columnist.

When the Graphic was suspended in 1932, Mr. Sullivan moved to the Daily News, where he remained. In recent years, his column-syndicated to newspapers throughout the country-had appeared twice a week.

Even Pope Displays Emotion

Bishops Show Human Side at Rome Synod By Israel Shenker

ROME, Oct. 14 (NYT).-Pope Paul VI attends most of the full sessions of the Synod of Bishops, and sits facing the bishops. When he hears a speech that impresses him by its spirituality, he greets the speaker, arms extended forward, palms upward, hands fluttering slowly.

If the Pope hears a speech that disturbs him-too political or too critical of the way the Roman Catholic Church is governed-he sits solemnly, with no hint of flutter. After Jozef Cardinal Slipyi, the exiled Ukrainian metropolitan of Lvov, had spoken up for Ukrainian rights, the Pope sat still and unsmiling. And when Bernard Jan Cardinal Alfrink, archbishop of Utrecht, leader of the progressive Dutch church, suggested that "the church, also through its hierarchical structure, can form an obstacle," the Pope sat frozen-Reporters are excluded from synod, but may not give interpretation. In reporting on the small group essions in which the synod has been meeting lately, they may not even identify who said what. Since there are 12 synod groups most of the talks go unreported Following, however, is an express office omitted it. A hishop described the synod in these terms: "We're stripping away layer after layer of law and tradition and history, not knowing what we're looking for, and afraid to find it."

Woman Heads Party

On Luxembourg Left LUXEMBOURG, Oct. 14 (AP). -An unmarried woman has been elected president of Luxembourg's Socialist Workers party, it was announced today.

Just before the synod opened the Pope observed his 77th nirthday, with no hint that retirement was on his mind. But that has not inhibited speculation about the next pope,

Archbishop Hurley quickly ran down the list of the last century's Pontiffs, beginning with the family name of Paul VI:

Quickly dismissing the chances of Leon-Joseph Cardinal Suenens, archbishop of Brussels-Malines (no R, thin face), it suddenly struck Archbishop Hurley that Cardinal Alfrink, a progressive who is unpopular with the Roman Curia, has an R in his name and a round face.

Conspicuous outside the synod hall is Frances Lee McGillicuddy. immediate past president of St. Joan's International Alliance, Catholic laywomen who press for women's rights in the church. She also reports for the Brook-lyn Tablet. When the synod

The British ships' visit coincides with fresh speculation by the South African media that the re-election of Prime Minister Harold Wilson with an overall majority in Parliament signaled a cooling of relations between Pretoria and London.

LONDON, Oct. 14 (AP),-A storm blew up in Parliament today over the Labor government's decision to permit military cooperation with South Africa.

The Labor party and govern-ment many times have denounced South Africa's racial policies as unjust and discriminatory and have vowed to resist them. But a modification of the government's position lately has been detectable. Authorities ascribed this to Britain's need to safeguard its large overseas markets. Leading leftist followers of Mr. Wilson, nevertheless, teamed up with opposition Liberals to assail the development. Norman Atkinson, who speaks for a strong group of Labor activists, demanded a special meeting of party legislators to discuss this

The Wake of Watergate

It is a curious fact that in the wake of Watergate Congress and the American people are concentrating on the corruption that money can impart to politics, when in fact the root corruption of Watergate was one of power. But there were enough revelations of the misuse of money in campaigns to provide a reasoned incentive for the sweeping reform bill which Congress has passed to make presidential elections a matter of public financing, and severely restricting private contributions in other

The case of the vice-presidential nomination of Nelson Rockefeller, however, and the articulate concern over his use of money, especially gifts and loans to political associates, is another matter. For everyone knew Mr. Rockefeller was very rich, throughout a political career that goes back through many campaigns, many elections as governor of New York, and several significant efforts to achieve the presidency. The same, differing only relatively, was true of the Kennedys.

There was a considerable degree of criticism of the fact that such men had an obvious advantage in entering politics, with their second or third generation wealth behind them, over the upwardly mobile young politician who had his family's cupboard to think about and who had to seek initial campaign revenues outside the family coffers. But on the whole, the voters tend to judge the Rockefellers and the Kennedys who sought public office on other grounds. Now, thanks to a number of factors, including the investigations permitted under the 25th Amendment, the Watergate syndrome and simple politics, the whole question of wealth and office-seeking is under intense scrutiny.

No one charges Nelson Rockefeller with anything illegal, either with the possession of his money or the use of it. In fact, a good deal of the present argument over his gifts begins to sound like the reduction to absurdity of the question of what a rich man is to do with his money. If he uses it solely for his own pleasures, he is a playboy; if he does not spend it all, he is penurious. If he gives it to worthy causes, through foundations, the foundations themselves are viewed with suspicion. And if he gives some to friends and fellow workers—is that human generosity, a contribution to public service, or an effort to exert power?

For money-and this goes back to Watergate—is power, and power has a potential peril to the community. But there is also a potential for good, and unless the rich are to be excluded from society and banished to expensive watering places to clip coupons in the company of their own kind, the criterion must be not whether the power exists but how it is used. There are other alternatives of course, one of which the British Labor party has threatened—to tax them till the pips squeak. But that involves other risks, to incentive and to imaginative investment. and it is not one that exists in the United States today. Nelson Rockefeller has used his money to good purpose, in the community interest, and to blame him for that at this late day in a distinguished career performs no useful purpose.

Exit Mr. Jaworski

After nearly a year of exemplary performance as special Watergate prosecutor, Leon Jaworski is leaving office under conditions that border on desertion of duty. Too many strands of the legal tangle left by the Nixon presidency remain unraveled to justify Mr. Jaworski's assertion that his task is largely finished now that the jury in the Watergate cover-up trial has been chosen and sequestered. Indeed, some of the statements made by the special prosecutor in his letter of resignation will contribute to making Watergate's final unraveling difficult, if not im-

He was appointed in the wake of the "Saturday Night Massacre" in circumstances requiring exceptional integrity, independence and legal professionalism. Mr. Jaworski supplied that and more. He took over a deeply shaken staff, kept it together and moved ahead almost without missing a step.

Under his leadership, major prosecutorial decisions were made which—with the large exception of permitting former Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst to plead guilty to a misdemeanor—seemed judicious and appeared to serve the overriding interest or bringing to public knowledge and pro tion the perpetrators of the most serious crimes of the Nixon administration. He persevered all the way to the Supreme Court in his quest for tapes and documents relating to the cover-up and thus was a major factor in terminating Mr. Nixon's presidency.

But Mr. Jaworski has been unwilling to challenge the validity of the Nixon pardon or use the advantages of his office to the fullest in preparing for the Congress the complete report of Mr. Nixon's malfeasance in office. On his emphatic letter to Attorney General Saxbe declining to test the legality of the pardon, Mr. Jaworski struck a note of certitude on a very dubious proposition. It is not at all clear that his charter is not broad enough to test Mr. Ford's use of the pardoning power. It is at least arguable that the President's act was an unwarranted intrusion on the special prosecutor's authority and subject to legal challenge.

Mr. Jaworski's reluctance to report to Congress on a completed investigation of Mr. Nixon is an even more dubious position. It is quite clear that he is required to submit a final report to Congress and there appears to be no reason whatsoever-other than Mr. Jaworski's reluctance to do so-to exclude from that report all of the details of the special prosecutor's investigations of Mr. Nixon's conduct.

Having taken those positions, Mr. Jaworski has created an atmosphere in which a decision by his successor to take either of those actions is bound to be highly controversial. And in withdrawing at this stage of the investigation. Mr. Jaworski has made highly unlikely the selection of someone of a stature similar to his own or that of Archibald Cox, the original Watergate special prosecutor. Although Henry Ruth, Mr. Jaworski's deputy and preferred successor, is a man of ability and integrity, his appointment would not replace the moral authority which Mr. Jaworski built up during his tenure and which he squandered by his untimely resignation.

While Mr. Jaworski deserves the nation's thanks for the job he did, there can be no applause for the jobs he left undone or for the manner in which he failed to do them. The plain fact is that the job he was appointed to do is not yet done and he considerably reduced the likelihood that it ever

Revival of the West

The critical dilemmas confronting the United States, the industrial nations and the world as a whole, in the last quarter of the 20th century, center on problems that are essentially economic—energy, money, food, population, resources, trade, and "slumpfiation."

Yet, to define these problems as economic may be something of a misperception. For their solutions almost certainly lie much more in a fundamental restructuring of polities and institutions than in application of the traditional laws of economics.

Secretary of State Kissinger's fresh appraisal of the world's future prospects-in his long, philosophic interview with James Reston, focuses attention on the crucial need to shape "a new international structure" that recognizes the increasing interdependence of Western Europe, Japan and the United States. Otherwise, he believes, "The Western civilization that we know is almost certain to disintegrate."

We share Kissinger's belief that this country and its allies must find "a way of not just overcoming the current economic crisis, but turning it into something positive by understanding the responsibilites they share for each other's progress and for developing cooperative policies that are explicitly directed toward world interests."

During the so-called "Year of Europe," Kissinger's efforts to create a new Atlantic structure clashed with West Europe's new "national and regional sense of identity." But the frustration of that endeavor does not diminish the need for a united Europe operating in cooperation with the United States. Only by organizing the industrial nations in support of common policies and common action can the problems of the less developed countries be dealt with adequately and peace with the Communist world be

For a generation, Americans have been sold international programs on the basis that they would end U.S. involvement; but the interdependence of the advanced countries has now reached a point that requires Americans to face the fact that their involvement in the world is a permanent affair.

The intelligent management of interdependence and the development of the international institutions this will require is the central challenge of our time.

WASHINGTON.—The nightmare which Henry Kissinger says fills him with a sense of inevitable tragedy is like sweet music to some of those watching the world from the Kremlin.

In his interview with James Reston of The New York Times, Kissinger spoke of the "almost certain disintegration of Western civilization, unless its member nations recognized their interdependence in today's economically troubled, inflation-ridden world. In a speech Leonid Brezhnev made at almost the same time, the Soviet leader diagnosed the "symptoms of the disease of capitalism of our fime"-eallop ing inflation, acute economic crisis, falling production and rising unemployment.

The crisis of Western democracy, he said, was "speeding up the disintegration of the political machinery of capitalist rule." Capitalism was finding that it was unable to answer the demands of time. To Brezhnev, all this was "unavoidable," because it stemmed from the "very Other nature of capitalism." Soviet spokesmen have filled in paints so broadly, and have looked forward happily to the final collapse of capitalism.

Old Dreams

For some time past, Brezhnev left all such talk to the hardliners who could not easily forget the old dreams of world revolution, such as Politburo members Mikhail Susloy and Borls Ponomarev. The Soviet model of the coming world crists has it that capitalism's economic troubles must cause it to attack the workers' living standards. The proletariat would retaliate, which would make the capitalist moneybags enlist the forces of Fascism In the confrontations that followed, either Communists or Fascists would prevail, which could lead to civil war and to international tensions which might result in wider wars.

Compare this with Kissinger's nightmare. His orderly mind has conceptualized the tragic progression, starting with a series of regional rivalries that would lead. first, to attempts by each region to maximize its own special advantages. This would lead "in-evitably" to tests of strength, which would aggravate the domestic crises of the countries involved. These, in turn, would bring about "authoritarian" regimes, whether Fascist or Communist be does not say, but presumably the first in some cases and the second in others.

The next stage would see international crises between these re-gimes, and "probably" military confrontations—but even without such confrontations, Kissinger says, "systemic" crises similar to those of the 1920s and 1930s are bound to be repeated. This is not quite the order in which Moscow sees it happening, but it is all there. We are all Marxists now-almost.

Different Marxists

But there are revolutionary Marxists, and evolutionary Marxists. Kissinger says that Communist state control is incompatible with the present needs of human organization, and that the Communist system will therefore change without any action by the United States-provided there is no foreign danger which would be invoked to impose regi-

The gap in the Kissinger interview, unavoidable in the give and take of question and answer, can be filled in from a speech just made by one of his top aides. Such as, perhaps, the need to support the Communist side in a civil war with Fascists, or to deter the United States from helping a democratic regime threatened by Communist revolutionaries?

Brezhnev and Kissinger foresee as a possible consequence of the West's crisis may lead them to press for arms limitation and reduction, but there are others, on both sides, who will find in these omens a powerful argument for the stepping up of the arms

Far from being endowed with Unfinished Business of Watergate

NEW YORK—There was a pic-ture in the paper the other day of Archibald Cox perched on one of the bridges over the River Cam, in Cambridge, England, where he is teaching this year. In the background were the lawns and glorious buildings that make Cambridge seem so serene, so detached from the troubles of the world. Looking at that scene, one wondered what the academics there make of this professor who brought down a president. It is a year since Cox said "no" to President Nixon's order that he stop trying to get any more White House tapes and docu-ments. In doing so, he knew he would be dismissed as Watergate special prosecutor. He feared that the whole effort to reassert the might fail. It did not, because his demonstration of character made the country understand what was at stake.

How long ago it all seems, that weekend in October, 1973. When a special prosecutor resigns, now, there is no earthquake. But Leon Jaworski's decision to leave is still an occasion to reflect on the special prosecutor's office and its unfinished business.

Haig's Call

A word first about Leon Jaworsky. He took the job under unfavorable circumstances. Because he was the Nixon administration's choice, some naturally suspected he would be soft. Nixon clearly hoped so, When Gen, Alexander Haig telephoned to offer the job, he told Jaworski that the country faced "a revolutionary situation. The Nixon White House thought Jaworski's function was to damp down the firestorm over the Cox

Jaworski was in fact no crusader. He was a cautious man, and deeply respectful of the presidency. He advised the Watergate grand jury not to indict Nixon. He was rejuctant to prosecute Nixon after the resignation. and he was probably just as happy to be relieved of the responsibility of decision by the pardon.

But his natural conservatism made it all the more telling when Jaworski stood up for the law against White House maneuvers, as he so honorably did. His in-

By Anthony Lewis sistence on pressing the issue of the subpoenss for White House tapes to resolution in the Supreme Court played a crucial part in bringing on last summer's denouement. It is no wonder that Richard Nixon is reported to have trouble now in speaking the name Jaworski.

The main work of the special prosecutor's office—the investigation and prosecution of the many crimes of Watergate—is now well in hand. The pending investigations, notably those into Nixon's tax practices and his use of campaign money from Howard Hughes and others, should be concluded before long.

Inform the Public . The duty that remains to be completed is informing the public. When the original charter was written for the special prosecutor. making reports to Congress and the public was pointedly listed as one of his responsibilities. Cox explained at the time that it was as important to know why someone was not prosecuted as to know that someone else was. We still need to know the reasons for some decisions—why, for example, former Attorney General Kicindienst's lie was handled so gent-

Another six months or so should be enough to wind up the investigations and pending cases and write the final report. For that period it will be important to have a genuinely independent person in charge-presumably Henry S. Ruth jr., who has been deputy to Cox and Jaworski. Then it will be safe to wind up this extraordinary office and let the Justice Department handle any tag ends.

But there is one other part of the business that requires urgent attention. That is publication of the full record of Watergate.

President Ford's pardon of Nixon cut short the ordinary legal process of bringing out the evidence. Whether Nixon will ever be subject to questioning in the cover-up trial is in doubt. The special prosecutor's office is concerned/about including in its report an accession, section about. someone who is not going to be prosecuted.

For all those reasons it is important to consider the problem

Peter Lennon

From London:

The immediate issue...

is what is going to happen to Edward Heath.

ONDON.-Now that the Labor party is back in office, with a shaky overall majority of three, the immediate issue which is fas-chating the public is not what Harold Wilson plans to do to counter inflation, but what is going to happen to Edward Heath. The tall, rigid musician and yachtsman with the sharp nose and the shark smile, and the celebrated vibrating shoulders (his substitute for laughing) has now led the Conservative party to three election defeats out of four, and the Tories are practically unanimous in accepting that he has to go as party leader.

Yesterday the powerful Tory 1922 compaitee met to work out a strategy if replacement. But they are, I sofar as a blaze of publicity will allow them, going about it circumspectly, since Ted Heath is a man of enormous selfconfidence and angry will. If it is done well he will probably become shadow foreign minister with the appropriate task of keeping a critical eye on Mr. Callaghan's attempts to renegotiate Britain's position in the Common Market, If it is done badly Ted Heath's political career may be

The mystery of Edward Heath is how this son of a small-time builder ever became leader of the aristocratic Conservative party. It is even more mysterious when the records reveal that at almost every stage of his career the Toalso wondered how he had got there and displayed an in-effectual will to get rid of him.

The Tories can only tolerate failure in amiable, bungling land-ed gentry like Sir Alec Douglas-Home, although they prefer their leader to a an entertaining villain like Harold Macmillan who prided himself on doing the exact opposite of what he said.

In politics Heath is a curiosity: a proletarian without the common touch; a music lover without apparent "ersonal passion; an cademic responsible for the revolutionary action of dragging a traditionally jingoist country "into Europe," but who has never been capable of articulating any imaginative reasons for his action. He is a man apparently of stubborn principle who never exhibited any distress at having to go against his own principles. Doggedly opposed to government intervention, when that great symbol of British opuleoce and stability. Rolls Royce, came looking for financial crutches he took it into public ownership.

outside the prosecutorial framework. Then the solution is really quite straightforward. It is simply to publish all the papers and tape transcripts relevant to Watergate.

Sound Approach

A sound approach is indicated in Sen. Gaylord Nelson's bill already passed by the Senate, to preserve the Nixon tapes and papers. It instructs the General Services Administrator to arrange access to the Nixon materials for a number of purposes, the first of which is to "provide the public with the full truth... of the abuses of governmental power known as Watergate.

The mechanism should be for the administrator to have an advisory panel go through the tapes, pick out all that is relevant to Watergate and not injurious to such other interests as fair trial, and publish it. Without comment _just the record. We may forget that the few tapes we do know were picked by Cox and Jaworski almost in the dark, on the basis of dates. The rest must be sifted. There is no justification for a general fishing expedition in the Nixon files now; we are usually better off with a decent repose. But on Watergate the country will not be satisfied with less than all the evidence. It is up to Congress, not the special prosecutor, to point the way.

No Rash Changes

The Missonis (husband Ottavio designs the textures and patterns while his wife Rosita decides on the shapes) are doing something that only great designers can do. They have established a style which they keep improving upon rather than making rash changes every season. For instance, they have kept last season's fishnet pattern which was an overwhelming success and they have translated it into summery fibers. They are also doing an encore of their flame stitch which they now use for their newest looking dress: a little tent with small bust and flaring skirt.

They have also retained their salt-and-pepper stitch which they use for this season's Ford: a three-piece ensemble with flared skirt, long sweater and triangular shawl. But the most popular shape in the whole collection is the shift or chemise which the Missonis deliver in a wide range: patchwork print. geometrics with knit collar and cuffs, solid-color cotton jerseys and, prettlest of them all, a pointilliste print with delicate, flat flowers a h. Albini said he is going to do a couture collection next January but, and he is frank about it: It is strictly a publicity ven-ture. "I don't believe in private clientele," he said, "I'll only do that to promote my name." Another collection worth mentioning was Cadette, whose fashion adviser is Karl Lagerfeld which accounts for the glorifled shirt story which Lagerfeld made very much his own last season. Muriel Grateau also turned out a fresh linen collection for Easile, with a clever combination light knit cardigans over floating tent dresses or flared skirts. Krizia started off well with long cardigans over slim skirts, had second-act trouble but recovered toward the end with bloused dresses and stoles in Spanish shawl prints.

OPERA IN ITALY

By William Weaver

TREVISO, Italy, Oct. 14.— While most of Italy's major opera houses are in real trouble —some without a general manager, some without an ar-tistic director, all without money —the Teatro Comunale of Treviso has just begun its an-_the nual Autunno Musicale, one of the most intelligent, popular and well-organized seasons in the comptry.

Since this year marks the 50th anniversary of Puccini's death, the Comunale has naturally decided to commemorate the event; and they are carrying out their plan with boldness. Be tween now and Christmas the Treviso theater will present all of Puccini's operas, in chronological order, and in late December there will also be a performance of Puccini's youth-

The first production of this Autumno Musicale combined the composer's two early operas, "Le Villi" and "Edgar." The first, shorter work was given a few years ago in Florence, but "Rigar" is a real rarity. Taken together, the two pieces make a fairly long evening, but they afford Puccini lovers a fascinating opportunity to sample the work of the composer when his gift, though already abundantly present, was not yet focused or directed. In "Le Villi" there are several tender, lyrical scenes that are pure Puccini: in "Edgar," such scenes are also present but there are other, long passages that suggest the artist was trying out less congenial paths. Though the influence of older composers—Puc-cini's teacher Ponchielli, his fellow-Lucchese Catalani-is evident, the operas have a vigor and charm all their own.

The much-criticized libretto of "Edgar" does indeed present a director with problems: the feckless hero, torn between the sensual Tigrana and the innocent Fidelia, succumbs to the former, repents, and-in a complex, symbolical self-indictment - regains the good girl, Beppe Menegatil's staging was fairly straight-forward, if not particularly imaginative (he did a better job with the more linear "Le Villi"). Tigrana's is the most difficult role, the keystone to the work; the mezzo-soprano Giovanna Vighi made a brave stab, despite an untidy, sprawling vo.cc. Heanna Sinnone was a suitably melancholy Fidelia, and, in the title role, Luciano Saldari who sang well in both operas. In "Le Villi" the soprano Vilma

Good Old Blood and Thunder In Rare Verdi Work: 'Attila'

LONDON, Oct. 14 (IHT).— and the subsequent cabaletta. Heard the very next r the everything was in focus, and his after the Coliseum premiere of Henze's "The Bassarids," with its perplexing intellectual preoccupations, the revival of Verdi's little-known "Attila" at the Royal Festival Hall on Saturday was a welcome antidote of old-fashioned Italian blood-and-thunder

No intellectual conundrums Passion, patriotism, venhere. geance, and a measure of duplicity, admirable or viliainous depending upon where one's symof early Verdian musical theater and in their deployment and development he was in a class by himself

"Attila" is a better opera than its neglect would suggest. Within its conventions it achieves memorable moments. There are big choruses, rousing concerted numbers, ariss and cabalettas, and vigorous, richly-scored orchestra (on this occasion nothing less than the London Symphony, conducted with authority and fervor by Anton Guadagno).

It can hardly be argued, however, that it is well suited to concert performance. Attila and his barbarian hordes cry out not only for the sack of Rome, but also to be seen as well as heard. Nor can the forceful utterances of Attila himself, even when delivered with the vocal splendor of the Met's Justino Diaz in an impressive London debut, have their properly elemental effect when issuing from the mouth of a basso cantante decorously attired in white tie and tails.

Another American, the Texan baritone Ryan Edwards, overcame the sartorial handican rather better in his one big scene at the beginning of Act II Earlier in the performance and in an carlier appearance in this series of concert operas, his symptuous voice has been plagued by erratic production. But here, in the everything was in focus, and his ovation was solidly earned. He is a baritone to watch. The Odabella, substituting for Rita Hunter, was the Welsh soprano Anne Edwards, as she had been at a recent theater produc-tion of "Attila" in Barcelona. Aside from some gusty top notes and less than immaculate fioritura, hers was a compelling percisco Ortiz, also of the Barcelona cast, a promising tenor whose faulty intonation is probably a consequence of faulty vocal pro-duction. It was not quite one of producer Denny Dayvise's starry nights, but it offered good, solid warm-blooded Verdi in music rarely heard, and for that one is duly thankful.

German Duchess Gets Rembrandt

BONN, Oct. 14 (Reuters),-A German duchess has won a six-year legal battle against the West German government for possession of a Rembrandt selfportrait worth about $1.3 million. Ownership of the painting, now in the Wallraf-Richariz Museum in Cologne, has been the subject of a legal dispute since the U.S. government handed it over to West Germany after World War II.

Between the two world wars the 331-year-old painting disappeared altogether, but turned up in 1945 in Dayton, Ohio. The U.S. government confiscated it as "enemy property" and later returned it to West Germany. Grand Duchess Elisabeth of Sexony-Weimar-Eisenach claimed it was the property of her family and had been exhibited on loan in a Weimar museum

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Daimler Gets Iraq Contract
Daimler-Bens of West Germany has signed a contract to sell Iraq 10,000 Mercedes trucks over the next three years. Daimler board mem-her Rolf Staelin said he could not confirm a report in Memo, the Middle East money magazine, that the deal was worth $1.03 billion. He also denied the magazine's report that the firm and the Baghdad government were negotiating a similar and possibly larger deal. Mr. Staelin says the deal for the 20-30-ton trucks was the largest of its kind between a motor vehicle company and a government.

Pilkington Defers Spending Program Pilkington Brothers Ltd., the U.K. glass prod-ucts firm, has decided to defer final commit-ment to its capital investment program of more than £150 million through the spring of 1977. Of the total, half is due to be spent in Britain and half abroad. Referring to Britain alone, Pilkington said that the board has decided that It is prindent to delay decisions on the com-misment of money to its capital program until such time as essential changes in taxation and price control are made. The firm also says it is examining its capital spending projects out-side Britain. The company says its investment plans had been hit by a higher rate of infla-tion than anticipated.

Yashica to Shut Plant, Cut Staff Yashica, the troubled Japanese camera and office equipment maker, plans to close one of its two camera plants and reduce its total work force 40 per cent. The plant, built in 1968, can produce 15,000 cameras a month, but recent output was running at 10,000 units. The plant produces single lens reflex cameras. Under a plan being negotiated with its labor union, 900 of Yashica's 2,500-person work force would be dismissed through "voluntary retirement." The company plans to meet severance payments by selling the closed plant for about 2 billion yen, officials said. Yashica attributed its moves to expectations of a lengthy depression in world camera markets. The company says it intends to proceed next spring with a previously announced plan to produce a new single lens re-flex camera in an agreement with Carl Zeiss of West Germany. Officials also say Yashica plans to make a new, inexpensive camera at an affiliate in Hong Kong.

Dow Chemical Drops Merger Plan

Dow Chemical has formally terminated its agreement to merge General Crude Oil Co. into Dow. Carl Gerstacker, Dow chairman, says his company gave notice of termination of the agreement made in August because of the delay in closing due to litigation resulting from the action of Glenmede Trust, controlling a majority of General Crude shares, in backing away from the merger. Glenmede, trustee of the Pew Me-morial Trust, owner of 63 per cent of General Crude, informed Dow on Sept. 4 that it was withdrawing from an agreement to sell its in-terest to Dow and instead had agreed to sell it to the International Paper Company. International Paper's offer was for $50 a share for General Crude common and $200 a share for preferred shares. This compared with the Dow offer of $45 for common and $180.56 for preferred. Dow says it is continuing its litigation against Glenmede for breach of contract and against International Paper for allegedly induring

-Burmah On Inc., the U.S. sub-sidiary of the British oil firm, will be the subject of a report due shortly by a Senate Interior subcommittee, a group that feels Burmah acquired too big a stake in the U.S. of industry.

In the past seven years, Bur-mah has grown in the United States from a seller of motor lubricants to the buyer of Signal Oil & Gas Co., which had been one of the largest independent oll exploration and production

Middle East to help form the Anglo-Persian Oil Co., which now is British Petroleum Co. Burmah is still a large shareholder in BP. which holds a large interest in Standard Oil Co of Ohio (Sohio). Carli Calls on Arab Nations To Invest in the Third World

ROME, Oct. 14 (AP-DJ).-Guido Carli, governor of the Bank of Italy, has called for an incomes policy to curb domestic inflation in all countries, import curbs and a much greater rate of investment in the third world, especially by newly rich countries producing

He said this was the only "realistic" method to solve the problems of growing trade deficits in industrialized countries. Other forms of recycling funds—through international special funds, bilateral agreements or commercial loans—could not be carried on

Mr. Carli made his remarks in a speech yesterday to Forex Club Italiano, in Stresa, on the Swiss border. A text became available

Aimed at OPEC

Though his remarks were directed at all countries exporting large amounts of raw materisks, his emphasis was on the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries

On the international scene, Mr. Carli said, "the countries with oil deficits will have to examine the means by which to reduce non-essential imports and increase the OPEC countries canno absorb all these exports, said: "There must be a search for the means which will permit them (the OPEC members) to make available their excess funds to underdeveloped countries to speed their investment programs."

"In this way, Mr. Carli said "oil-producing nations could get the same income and importing nations could sell their goods in part to producing nations and in part to developing countries,"

Bigger Returns

The plan would, in effect, switch part of the debt burden from the industrialized countries to the developing ones, but Mr. Carli suggested that the margins for return on investment could be higher in the third world than in more advanced countries, and thus repayment terms would be easier to work out

However, he said, no such plan would work if individual countries did not solve their internal

Referring specifically to Italy, Mr. Carli said: "We cannot think about competing in this opera-tion if we have not resolved our internal inflationary spiral. A monetary policy becomes useless their exports."

Profit-Taking Cuts Stock Surge

Prices advanced strongly on the New York Stock Exchange today although they yielded ground to profit-takers toward the close.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 15.33 to 673.50 points after an advance of 55.54 points in the three previous sessions. It was ahead 27 points at its high

Advancing issues led losers by about 1,200 to 340, while volume totaled 19,77 million shares compared with 20.09 million Friday. Several brokerage houses noted continued heavy public participation in the current rally and said institutions had generally been inactive even during the gains

They continued to attribute gains in part to falling interest rates and predictions that the bank prime rate may pull back to 11 per cent. It is now generally 11 3/4 per cent with some banks at 11 1/2 per cent. Some brokers said the public seems to be signaling that it no longer fears a possible depression.

Swiss Bank Grows Bullish On U.S. Securities Market

Basel, Oct. 14 (AP-DJ).— Swiss Bank Corp. is becoming "more open to investing in firstquality American shares" than it has been in recent months, Jacques Ittensohn, vice-president and chief analyst, said in an interview today.

Until a periodic policy review recently, the basic approach was to stress "liquidity, liquidity, and liquidity," he commented.

The bank now is "less gloom)

Confidence Level Of U.S. Public At 28-Year Low

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Oct. 14 (AP-DJ).—The University of Michigan's survey research center reported U.S. consumer confidence has hit essentially the lowest point in the 28-year history of its survey of consumer at-titudes. It mostly blamed "increased worries about a slowdown in the economy."

Economists George Katona and Jay Schmiedeskamp, who head the survey, said that "there isn't any reason to believe that the current decline is temporary."
Rather, they said, "experience suggests that the present combination of very deep consumer pessimism and decline in real incomes might make for a severe

For the survey period, the center's index of consumer sen-timent stood at 645. The index uses February, 1966 as the base of 100. The only lower index number came in February of this year when the figure stood at

The economists noted this "was judged to be in large part temporary because the interviews were conducted during the oil embargo." So, in effect, the latest reading, said Mr. Schmiedeskamp in an interview, "is the lowest ever."

into bonds and shares," Mr. Ittensohn said. The strategy is still cautious, however, he stressed Only clients with "sufficient liquidity" are being advised to start ac-quiring selected U.S. shares, and those legally able to own gold are still advised that "larger portfolios should contain a gold position.' Mr. Ittensohn also indicated the bank prefers to set top limits on its U.S. purchases, so that it would not be acquiring shares at prices it deems unduly high and likely to come down again soon. And when individual shares rise to "potentials" as-cribed to them by the bank, it will be prepared to sell them off and take its profit, he added. Recent rallying in U.S. shares still could be reversed easily, Mr. Ittensohn thinks, so that "you need to be much more flexible." Under prevailing con-ditions, "you have to follow up very, very closely—this is no more a time when you can invest and forget it." The U.S. shares that Swiss Bank Corp. is currently recom-mending for growth are Bur-roughs Corp., IBM, Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, Pfizer Inc., Schlumberger Ltd. and Upjohn Co.

Its list of recommended "inent grade" stocks is longer including, among others, General Electric Co., American Telephone & Telegraph, Dow Chemical Gillette and May Department Stores. Just added to its list "other recommended shares" is Delta Air Lines.

General Telephone & Electronics 60 companies employing over 195,000 people throughout the world a growing concern for your growing needs. We're GIE of Mexico.

Moreover, Signal brought with it a 195 per cent interest in the Thickle oil field in the UK sector of the North Sea. The field is currently expected to produce at least 300 million barrels of oil, giving Burmah about 60 million barrels of additional North Sea reserves.

Aside from producing about 45,090 barrels of oil and 73 millien cubic feet of gas a day in the United States, Signal also has geothermal wells in California, a in the Midwest and a fuel-oil distributing subsidiary on the Part Ceest. Errmele's U.S. activities have led to 1,530 pages of testimony and written submissions to the interior subcommittee. The panel's report traces the links between several oil companies affected by the Signal acquisition. Basically, · Eurmah holds a 22 percent interest in BP, which is the seventh-largest oil company in the world. The British government holds 49 per cent of BP. and the remaining 29 per cent is widely scattered among small shareholders. The report argues that "since the Crown has never cd to climb gradually, to 54 per cent within a few years, as Schio's production of Alaska's Prudhoe Bay oil rises. Sohio, the 19th-lagest U.S. oil company, controls more than half of Prudhoe Bay's estimated nine billion barrels of oil reserves

• Before the Burmah-Signal

merger, the two companies were "competitive rivals" in bidding for oil and gas exploration teases in the Gul of Mexico, the report says. Now, of course, they are not. Last April, Schio and Signal, acting in separate consortiums, submitted the only two bids for a federal oil-share tract in Utah. "Obviously," the report says, "bidding cannot be truly competitive where the alleged rivals (Sohio and Signal) are in fact the progeny of a single corporate interest (Burmah)." Burmah's president Max Rob-erts scoils at any suggestion of Burmah influence on BP and thus incirectly on Sohio. That's a joke," he says. "We have no say in BP at all; never had, All we get from BP is dividends and they're passed straight on to the (Burmah) sharcholders. We've got only one man on the BP board and we've got no impact or uny-

Agriculture: High on the list of the world's important industries.

And Tenneco has a part in it.

The most basic of human needs. And, a growing demand around the world. All of which points to an exciting, challenging future for farmers.

Tenneco is part of that future. Not just in farming, for growing is only a part of our agricultural involvement, but as . packers and marketers of U.S. agricultural produce, and as a worldwide manufacturer of farm machinery.

Heggblade-Marguleas-Tenneco, our agricultural division, is a leading marketer of fresh produce under the Sun Giant brando name. It serves as the marketing agent for over 2,000 independent U.S. growers. Through our marketing facilities and expertise, these farmers have gained access to new and enlarged markets. At the same time, the consumer receives a premium product through such techniques as hydro-cooling, which permits certain fruits and vegetables to be picked at flavorful maturity and survive shipment without over-ripening.

Increased farm productivity calls for improved machines. Our JI Case tractor division builds farm machinery that does more work, yet provides more comfort and safety for the farmer.

Our line reaches from garden tractors to mid-sized David Brown tractors to giant 4-wheel drive Case machines. Manufactured and sold around the world.

Where demands are great, so is the opportunity. And Tenneco is heavily involved in other areas of growing demand. Such as oil and gas, shipbuilding, pipelining, chemicals, packaging, auto

Challenges all—but Tenneco has grown on challenges

LOOK AT THE HARLEQUINS!

By Vladimir Nabokov. McGraw-Hill. 253 pp. $7.95.

WHO but Vladimir Nabokov would invent a fictional novelist for the sole purpose of comparing him unfavorably with Vladimir Vadimovich? Vadim Vadimovich, the hero of "Look at the Harlequins!" is a Russian emigre writer whose career "slyly" parallels his creator's. They diverge significantly only in the quality of their work.

Though Vadim is a celebrated author of considerable accom-plishment, he is haunted by "a dream feeling that my life was the nonidentical twin, a parody. an inferior variant of another man's life . . . a demon, I felt, was forcing me to impersonate that other man, that other writer who was and would always be incomparably greater, beauther and crueler. ." A charitable interpretation of "Look at the Harlequins!" would suggest that the author is poking fun at himself, but, in my opin-ion at least, neither the tone of this book nor anything else ever written by Nabokov encourages this view. Far more con-vincing is the impression that he is condescending to indulge in a few pleasantries on the subject of our short-sightedness. He is not merely the famous artificer, wit and stylist his admirers consider him to be, but "incomparably greater." So great, in fact, that he passeth understand-ing. One of Vadim's character-istics is an inability to turn around in the street and retrace his steps—as in returning home, for example, after going to the tobacco store, on the corner. Instead, he feels that he must turn the street 180 degrees on the axis of his self. A more egocentric tic is difficult to imagine, and since we have been in-

Connoisseurs of squeezes have often noted that they have a protean quality: different lines of play by the declarer of the defense will often lead to a dif-ferent squeeze ending. A striking example of this is the diagramed deal reported from a Reisinger Knockout Team match in the United States last May. South opened one no-trump with a hand that many would regard as below the acceptable minimum and North took the bit between his teeth. When the Gerber convention revealed that South held two aces and two kings, a contract of seven spades seemed a fair gamble. North hoped that one of the kings w '1 be in spades, and falling that, South might hold the queen and finesse successfully.

As it turned out, South had the king, but the grand slam was a poor contract. South, as the accidental declarer, had just over a 50-50 chance of collecting the spade queen, but that would give him only 12 tricks. For the -Baseball commissioner Bowle Kuhn yesterday declined to rule on a request from Jim (Catfish) Hunter, the Oakland A's pitcher, to declare him a free agent because he had not been paid the final $50,000 of a $100,000 contract for 1974.

Kuhn said he had received a request for the action from both Hunter's attorney, Carlton Cherry, and Marvin Miller, executive director of the Baseball Players'

The commissioner replied that the issue was a legitimate disputebetween the two parties and, on the basis of evidence in hand, he could not make a judgment. He offered to confer with Hunter's representatives and explore the matter further after the World Series.

Hunter, a 25-game winner, accused Charles O. Finley, the Oakland owner, of reneging on $50,000 of his 1974 contract.

"Hunter requested that $50,000 of his 1974 salary be placed in annuity insurance," the com-missioner said. "Mr. Finley de-clined but offered to pay Hunter. the $50,000, making out a check to any person Hunter named. Lee MacPhail, president of the American League, was witness to this offer."

Under baseball rules, a player cannot be declared a free agent when there is basis for dispute. The controversy centered around tax shelters. Finley insisted that if he paid the $50,000 to an insurance company as an annuity for Hunter, it would not be tax deductible for Finley as a business expense.

Mets Acquire Cards' Torre

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 14 (UPD. The New Yorks Mets did something yesterday they had been trying to do for six years when they obtained slugger Joe Torre from the St. Louis Cardinals in a three-player trade. Turre, 34, a lifetime 300 hitter with more than 2,000 major league hits and more than 1,000 runs batted in, went to the Mets for two second line pitchers.

games with a 3.41 earned run average for the Mets this year. Torre, who batted .282 with 11 homers and 70 runs batted in this year, very nearly became a Met six seasons ago. New York had been trying to obtain him since 1968 when he was with the Atlanta Braves and the teams were close to a deal then but the Mets balked when the Braves insisted on Amos Otis, a major league outfield prospect at the one field goal earlier in the game and nearly blocked two punts," Mudra ordered his punter to run out of the end zone for a deliberate safety that cut the lead to 7-5. This enabled Florida State to punt on a free kick from its 20 without worrying about Alabams blocking the kick. But the Crimson Tide struck back quickly and made 32 yards on a pass from Jack O'Rear, a fourth-string quarterback, to Ozzie Newsome, a freshman flanker. This put the ball at the Florida State 16. Go-Go Tax Reform with Washington is that it is a very suspicious town which keeps jumping to the wrong conclusions. The other morning involved in an altercation at the Tidal Basin with three women and another man. It was report-go-go dancer. The next morning everyone assumed that the powerful chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee was involved in some sort of hanky-panky. This couldn't be further from the truth. No matter how it looked in the newspapers and on television, Mills was doing the people's business.

This is what happened: Sunday night Mills decided to go to the Junkanoo nightelub to hold hearings on a tax-reform bill he was preparing to submit to the House. Several witnesses, including four or five go-go girls, testified that tax reform was absolutely essential if everyone in the United States were to get a fair shake. Mills remarked after each witness testified "Til drink to that."

As the evening wore on, more and more witnesses gave Mills in-out on what should be included in the tax-reform bill. Several testified against off-depletion allowances, others against real-estate

It was a lively hearing with people getting a lot of things off their chests. About 1 o'clock in the morning, Mills decided to adjourn

Mills, who sat between the ladies, tried to be peacemaker. He pointed out that he was personally against an added tax on income that would affect the lower-middle classes. When he said this, the lady who was for biting the bullet punched him in the nose. Trying to recoup some of his dignity, the congressman added that although he was opposed to a surcharge on income taxes, he could see the reason for having one if it would stop

This angered the other woman, who started scratching his face. Since both women were out of order, Mills ordered the man driving the car to stop by the Tidal Basin, tried to mediate the dispute, but to no avail. One of the women said Mills had no interest in tax reform and, while he talked a good game, he hadn't done anything about it for years.

Rep. Mills was very moved by all this and went into seclusion to redraft his entire tax-reform legislation.

The Index at the Savoy

By Jeffrey Robinson

LONDON (IHT).—To start with, the driveway at the Savoy is the only street in all of England where cars keep to the righthand side. Then of course there's the hotel's pedigree: created by Richard D'Oyly Carte (the original producer of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas), put on the map by César Eliz, cuisine by Auguste Escoffier, an orchestra led by Johann Strauss, a floor show danced in by Anna Pavkova.

There are 400 bedrooms and 100 suites, and a staff of 1,500 caters to the guests day and night. There are 14 page boys, whose maximum height is five feet, and the kitchen uses 14,000 eggs a week.

Yet when it comes to facts, nothing in the Savoy can beat "the index." Here's where information on most guests who have stayed at the hotel is stored.

"There are over 120,000 cards on file," remarks one member of the staff. "For the most part the cards are filled with things like home address, business address and what rooms the client has stayed in But in some cases there are additional notes because some clients need special

If in a world of disintegrating values they cannot any longer have perfection in their own homes, then it's up to us to keep the standards high when they stay here." Several guests from the Middle East ask that their bed be turned to face Mecca. A notation on one card reminds the staff that Mrs. X needs a sufficient supply of bread crumbs when she arrives so that she can clean her kid gloves. Someone else must have guava jelly every morning with breakfast. Yet someone else demands that platter of cucumber sandwiches and English pork sausage be waiting in his room the moment he gets there.

The more eccentric the request, the better the Savoy seems to like it. A case in point, the idlosyncrasy of the American who refuses to live by European time. He keeps his watch set for Los Angeles, which is eight hours earlier.

Tummy Time

"He's on tummy time," says Mr. Griffin "As long as he stays here though, a full course dinner is served him somewhere around 3 a.m. GMT. And why shouldn't any civilized man eat when he wants to ad of when other people think he should?"

Of course, the index is confidential and not open to anyone outside the staff. The management was more than willing to make a list of such eccentricities as, "no pink flowers in Mrs. X's room be she threw them out the window the last time." And, "Countess X says she can't sleep unless she has a room with striped curtains." And, "Mr. X wants hot milk in his corn flakes." But the management would not tie names to any of the requests except in a few cases of well-known people, and even then, delicately.

"After all," came the explanation, "the index is one of the means we have of seeing that our guests are taken care of and certainly one of their needs is for privacy. We respect that, indeed." Mariene Dietrich demands the largest bed in the hotel. Maris Callas one night suddenly decided that the placement of the piano in her room, which was in exactly the same spot it had always been for her, was not satisfactory and had to be moved to the room of her concert partner, Giuseppe di Stefano. Then she even stipulated that only one of the assistant general managers could be trusted to touch the piano.

Champagne Magnate

Champagne magnate George Kessler once flooded the Savoy's courtyard so that his guests could be served dinner aboard gon-dolss. Henry Irving lived permanently at the Savoy and James McNeil Whistler, who seemed constantly to be feuding with Irving, lived down the hall. They were forever ignoring each other in the elevator, and the staff was fully briefed to see that confrontations were avoided.

Names don't necessarily matter when the index has such stories to tell as the one about the time someone came in with a net leoperd. As animals are "not generally accepted," the leopard was politely escerted outside. Or the story of the shelkhs who sometimes arrive with an entourage inchiding wives and cooks and, notes the ndex, their own carpets.

The most precise guest in the hotel's index history is named by the management, without hesitation. They say the prise has to go to Noel Coward.

Like many people who deal or have dealt regularly with the Savoy, he left clothes there so he'd never need a suitcase. (One guest, according to the index, deposits her Russian sable in ice storage at the hotel all year around, while another has left nine suits and a duffle cost there.)

Yet Coward was hardly that simple. Besides, the clothes, says Mr. Griffin "he wanted five pillows and a large bed. Then he insisted that the tables, the chairs, his pills and even his water glass all be placed in exactly the same way every time he stayed here. It took some doing but we finally worked out a system. When we got everything exactly the way he liked we had the room photographed and filed the picture in the index. From then on, we simply followed the index to the minutest detail."
